As Others See Us.

Commenting on the election of Mayor Blain in becoming surety for those who are held on the charge of law violations, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "Perhaps he acted without due reflection, in which case he should at once withdraw from the courts. Mayor Blain is in no position to decide these cases in advance of the courts, and it is decidedly unbecoming in him, the city's chief administration guardian of law and order, to be sponsor for anything tantamount to the mob spirit. HIS SIGNING OF BONDS WAS EITHER AN ERROR TO BE REPAIRED OR AN ACT OF SYMPATHY WITH MOB LAW."

"It remains for the mayor to show in this matter whether he stands with the lynchers or upholds the laws of the state." Certain neither Mayor Blain nor his friends can take issue with the foregoing temperate and in every way fair deductions from a plain statement of facts. Mayor Blain did go on the bond of men who were arrested on a most serious charge, and by remaining on those bonds he is committing an error which, because of his present position, he is obliged to at all times use his utmost efforts to avoid. It puts Springfield "in bad" with the rest of the world for its chief executive to seem to sympathize with those who have put themselves above the law and the courts.

The fact that Mayor Blain regards his friends in the present case as innocent is hardly a sufficient defense. It is his duty to avoid all compromises or entangling alliances with such as are charged with overstepping the law.
